SEE REBEL ARMY AND FALL BACK

Federals Marching Against Juarez Forego An Attack

Villa's Bloodless Victory—Rebel Chief Declares He Has A Twelve-Mile Battle Line Fifteen Miles South Of Juarez—Army Encamped Awaiting Return Of The Regulars—Ten Thousand Men Engaged On Both Sides

El Paso, Tex., Nov. 24. — With a battle line extending for 12 miles from Baucha, on the west, to Lamesa, on the east, less than 15 miles south of and below Juarez, Pancho Villa's rebel army has overawed and driven back the federal army which Saturday was menacing Juarez.

This is the substance of a report brought to Juarez by Villa himself, who with a bodyguard of 40 men returned from the front to arrange for sending additional supplies to his men. A federal troop train arrived at Tierra Blanca, but the federals were driven back before a general engagement took place, and Villa says the entire federal force is in full retreat. Tierra Blanca is only 18 miles from Juarez.

Panic-stricken by the sight of the vanguard of the rebel army, Villa declares the federal army advancing to attack Juarez retreated in haste. He says: "The federals hastily backed their trains southward from the neighborhood of Tierra Blanca. We do not know how far they went, but think they did not stop before reaching Samalayuca."

Samalayuca is 32 miles south of Juarez, on the Mexican Central railroad, where the first fight occurred Saturday.

Federals Retreat.

The principal fighting that has featured the northward advance of the federals took place near Samalayuca when a rebel scouting party of 100 men under Rodolfo Plerro moved to attack a party of federal soldiers who had detained them.

According to Plerro, the Huerta troops had unloaded two cannon from the train, which was the leading one in the group of eight which are carrying the Huerta soldiers northward. "They turned their cannon on us when we were several miles away," says Plerro, who accompanied Villa to Juarez. "We had no artillery, but kept moving toward them. When we got within a mile of the train the federals reloaded their artillery and backed down the track. No member of my command was killed or wounded by the firing. Later they advanced toward Juarez and got to Tierra Blanca, when, Villa says, they saw his army coming out of Juarez and again retreated."

Villa encamped his army and is waiting for the federals to approach again. If they don't come, he says he will go after them in a few days. He does not mean to bring his army back to Juarez unless driven in by the federals, he declared. Villa says he thinks the federal army numbers 4,000 men, although federal agents here claim it numbers 9,500. The rebels have between 5,000 and 6,000 men.

Pending the hearing Monday, Beckholt's bond was fixed at $500.—Newark Advocate.

Defining the Disease. "I've cared for several persons," she explained, "but I never have loved any one so that I would have been willing to give up my home and work for him if necessary. That is real love, isn't it?" "No; that isn't real love. That is softening of the brain."—Chicago Record-Herald.
